At Silverton Middle School students will alternate days between teacher-led learning and independent learning days.

Teacher-led Learning

Students will participate in live, synchronous class periods through Google Meets twice a week. Teachers will guide students in new instruction, assist students with work already in progress, and provide a range of engaging activities for their classes. These live sessions will be recorded and posted in Canvas to allow students who were unable to attend, access to the material. We do not expect that these live meetings will take the entire hour, but will be a mix of live instruction and guided work, with teachers available for students as they work through the material. We want to give families flexibility during this unique time, however we believe that students participating in live instruction twice a week is key to their success.

Independent & Applied Learning

Students will engage in learning through a variety of methods independently. They will apply the learning they received during live teacher-led instruction, keep on pace within their learning modules through the Edgenuity program, and possibly work directly with other students or staff in certain circumstances. On these days students will complete their work independently and on their own schedule. We recommend setting up an at-home schedule that works well for your family.
